

Training & Development

The Master of Education (M.Ed.) degree in Training and Development, a fully online program, is based on a reflective practice approach offering practitioners opportunities to integrate their professional experiences with human resource development knowledge and practice skills. Completing this master's program will give you the professional knowledge and skill required for entry or advancement in instructional design, and instructional, administrative, or evaluation positions that involve performance-based training. Our courses are in alignment with the Association of Talent Development's Core Competency Model.

Our program emphasizes:

- Interaction
- Collaboration
- Team Learning
- Reflective Practice
- Adult Learning

Admission Requirements

Applicants for the M.Ed. degree in Training and Development must complete an application through the Graduate School, submit a personal statement, post-secondary transcripts, and three letters of recommendation. GRE scores are not required. Please see the Training and Development Program website for complete details.

Degrees

- Training & Development (MEd) (<http://catalog.ncsu.edu/graduate/education/training-development/training-development-med/>)
- Training & Development (Minor) (<http://catalog.ncsu.edu/graduate/education/training-development/training-development-minor/>)

Faculty

Full Professors

Duane Akroyd

Tony W. Cawthon

Joy Gaston Gayles

Audrey J. Jaeger

Stephen Robert Porter

Alyssa Nicole Rockenbach

Associate Professors

Susan J. Barcinas

James E. Bartlett II

Chad David Hoggan

Practice/Research/Teaching Professors

Michelle E. Bartlett

Diane D Chapman

Kenneth Lyle Ender

Barry A. Olson

Mary Elizabeth Rittling

Jennifer J. Stanigar

Robert Grant Templin Jr.

Carrol Lynn Adams Warren

Emeritus Faculty

Carol Edith Kasworm

George B. Vaughan