A. Credentials Required for Teaching Graduate Courses

The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools Commission on Colleges (SACSCOC) requires that graduate courses be taught by faculty with an earned doctorate/terminal degree in the teaching discipline or a related discipline. To that end, the following requirements for the teaching of graduate courses are established:

- Both primary and secondary instructors must be graduate faculty in the academic program offering the course or approved non-graduate faculty (see Section 1.3 of the Administrative Handbook, sub-sections C and E).
- All instructors must have an active record in HR (Human Resources).
- Sections of the following courses must be taught by associate or full members of the graduate faculty:
 - XXX 685 Master's Supervised Teaching
 - XXX 686-687 Master's Other Teaching
 - XXX 690 Master's Exams
 - XXX 691-699 Master's Research
 - XXX 885 Doctoral Supervised Teaching
 - XXX 886-887 Doctoral Other Teaching
 - XXX 890 Doctoral Exams
 - XXX 891-899 Doctoral Research
- Support personnel do not need to be graduate faculty but they must have 0% teaching load assigned.
- All sections must have valid instructors listed (STAFF or blank is not acceptable).

H. Credit Hours for Intensive Graduate Courses

A maximum of one credit hour will be awarded per week of full-time study for graduate courses offered by NC State University. At least 60 days before such a course is taught, the syllabus must be submitted to the Graduate School for approval.

I. Syllabus Requirement for Graduate Courses

All instructors of graduate courses are required, no later than the first class, to provide students with a written or electronic course syllabus which contains the information listed in NC State's Syllabus Regulation (<https://policies.ncsu.edu/regulation/reg-02-20-07/>) (REG 02.20.07).

A syllabus must be approved by the Administrative Board of the Graduate School as part of a new course proposal.
