Global Public Health (GPH)

GPH 201 Fundamentals of Global Public Health (3 credit hours)
Introduction to Public Health, providing a population-based perspective on disease and injury causation and prevention. Environmental, social, behavioral, and biological determinants of health and disease. Access to health services from a global perspective. Selected tools of disease control and health promotion and problems related to health-care delivery to society as a whole and to vulnerable populations.

Typically offered in Fall and Spring