

Political Science (BA): International Politics Concentration

To see more about what you will learn in this program, visit the Learning Outcomes website (<https://apps.oirp.ncsu.edu/pgas/>)!

Major requirements are 18 hours of core courses that cover major political science sub fields including; American government, comparative politics, international relations, political theory, public law and policy, and research methods; 15 hours of political science electives, 12 of which must be taken at the 300 level or above, and one of which must be a 400 level senior seminar, which includes a substantial research requirement. Grades of C- or better are required for courses applied towards the major. At graduation, a minimum GPA of 2.0 is required for all political science courses taken. For a semester-by-semester guide to the course requirements for the Bachelor of Arts curriculum, including all of the concentrations described below, see the departmental website (<http://spia.ncsu.edu/ps/undergraduate.html>).

Students who wish to focus their studies in the sub fields of international and comparative politics may elect this concentration in the Political Science Bachelor of Arts program:

International and Comparative Politics

Students in this concentration will be directed to a series of elective courses in the areas of international and comparative politics. Students in this concentration will develop skills that benefit students interested in graduate or professional school, careers in government service, civil society, issue advocacy, and businesses with international interests. Courses in this concentration will particularly develop student's knowledge of political systems outside of the United States and international political processes, and will be well positioned to understand the role of North Carolina and the United States in international political events. Major requirements are: 18 hours of core courses and 15 hours of concentration electives in comparative and international politics.

Career Opportunities

A degree in political science is excellent preparation for a number of careers and graduate opportunities. Political science majors study critical issues surrounding such things as international security, public policy, and government practices. They develop real-world skills such as solving problems logically and systematically, working with others in vertically and horizontally organized arrangements, expressing a position and defending it with corroborating evidence, and writing clear and correct prose. They also develop citizenship and leadership competencies that include the personal obligation to participate in public life. Consequently, political science majors are well-positioned for careers in teaching, the legal profession, criminal justice agencies, state and local government, urban planning, the federal bureaucracy, journalism or in any of the organizations that seek to monitor political processes or to influence the content of public policy. Private firms also seek managers and public affairs specialists who have a knowledge of the functioning of the political system and of politics in general.
