Inter-College Transfer (ICT) Program

The Inter-College Transfer (ICT) program provides students the opportunity to work with an experienced, cross-curricular advisor to explore majors and work towards meeting Change of Degree Application (CODA) (<https://studentservices.ncsu.edu/academics/degrees/coda/>) requirements to change majors, outside their current college/program.

The ICT program is designed for:

- Students who are interested in changing their major outside of their current college or program but are not ready to matriculate into the new major
- Students who are no longer interested in pursuing their current major but are undecided about a major and want to explore
- Those who are not making progress towards their major and are in jeopardy of being placed on progress deficiency; students must be willing to look at realistic options for majors.
- Students who are readmitted to the university do not plan to pursue their original major.

Students transfer from their current major/college into the ICT program (after completing at least one full-time semester -- 12 credit hours -- at NC State) and are assigned to an academic advisor affiliated with University Advising & Exploratory Studies.
